

Frankfurt International School will host the second European Brain Conference on 8 and 9 April 2010.

The aim of the conference is to provide an opportunity for educators to learn about the latest in neuroscience research that will help children learn to their maximum capacity. How the brain functions and factors that impact student learning will be examined and explained.

Presenters at the conference will provide information and practical strategies and applications, based on research, which can be used in the classroom to enhance student learning. This two day conference will include group discussion, useful classroom applications and collaboration with researchers, neuroscientists and educators.

In 2008 FIS hosted our first European Brain Learning & Applications Conference. This was a resounding success with over 150 teachers attending from International Schools throughout Europe and beyond. Please join us in 2010.
